

On a hot summer day in Maycomb, Alabama, Helen Robinson walked from her home to her job working in Mr. Link Deas's field. As she was walking she spotted Mayella Ewell on her way from her house to the town dump where she planned to search for more flower pots. Meanwhile Nathan Radley was walking from The Radley Place to the post office to mail a letter to Mr. Underwood asking him to print an article about Mrs. DuBose's camellias. He passed Atticus on the way from his office home for lunch. Before he left for his lunch break, Atticus oversaw Tom Robinson's move from the Maycomb Jail to the Courthouse to await his trial. Jem and Scout were visiting Miss Maudie Atkinson hoping for a slice of Lane cake when they saw Atticus heading home.
